

Diversity is the life-blood of this nation. Consolidation can only discourage the efforts of small, creative groups and individuals who have something fresh and possibly irreverent to say. Already, important news stories and opinions are not reaching the people because they are not "popular". There must be constraints on the control of media-channels so they are not overtaken by bloated capitalist interests.